After Rolling Out Regulatory Review ...Obama Rolls Out Job Crushing Red Tape

On January 18, President Obama rolled out an Executive Order for his Administration to do a thorough review of the nation's regulatory framework in order to free America's businesses from burdensome and duplicative regulations.

His own Administration ignored him.

January 18, 2011: "The EPA is 'confident' it will not have to alter current or pending environmental regulations, including upcoming climate rules, as part of the new regulatory review framework." The Hill, January 18, 2011

January 28, 2011: The Obama administration's own experts estimate their proposal for coal mining would eliminate thousands of jobs and slash production across much of the country. The Associated Press, January 28, 2011

February 1, 2011: "The EPA has decided that, since milk contains oil, it has the authority to force farmers to comply with new regulations to file 'emergency management' plans to show how they will cope with spilled milk, how farmers will train 'first responders' and build 'containment facilities' if there is a flood of spilled milk." Washington Examiner, February 1, 2011
